A.K. Agarwal (b. August 28,1949)

[92,447,1980,2019,2,2]

Dr. Agarwal is from India and studied for his bachelors and masters at the Agra University in India. Later going to America to complete his post doctorate at Pennsylvania State University. Throughout his career, he focused more into n-color compositions and partitions, where many publications had direct publications on the Ramanujan Journal, that is journal dedicated to areas of math that Ramanujan influenced. His first pieces of work focused classic, biorthogonal, and hypergeometric polynomials. He currently is an emeritus at Punjab university, after many years holding prestigious titles such as, President of the Indian Mathematical Society, council member of the Ramanujan Mathematic Society, and the President of the Society for Special Functions and their Applications.