A telegram from Denver, Colorado, is not without interest in Sonora. It states that Governor Waite has granted pardon to Jacob M. Fereber, who was sentenced to the penitentiary in 1874 but escaped from custody before being taken to jail. He shot and killed a Mexican, who was one of the party that broke into his cabin at the summit of the Sangre de Christo pass where he was prospecting. He was convicted, and sentenced for seven years. The sentence was considered unjust by Fereber's friends, and one night the jail was purposely left open. The prisoner walked out and fled to Mexico, where he prospered. He has been mayor of Magdalena, and financial agent of the Mexican government, one of the highest offices that can be conferred by the President of the Republic. Fereber's desire to secure a pardon from the penitentiary arises from the fact that he wishes again to live in the United States as his health has failed.
